TUESDAY EVENING, JANUARY 1.

Fatal Inundations.

Notwithstanding all precautionary measures, inundations have too often spread over these verdant meadows, depositing their germs of disease in man and beast, although at the same time fertilizing the soil. It was one of these inundations, in 1230, which transformed the arid earth into fertile prairies by covering it with a kind of mud, which was not the only service the overflowing waters rendered the country that year. Bands of wolves were destroyed, which for long centuries had been the terror of the neighborhood. These voracious beasts, not content with decimating whole flocks of sheep, dared even to attack man. During the severe winter seasons they would hover around the villages, obliging the peasants to engage in fearful combats before they could be driven back to their retreats. Even the dead they would drag from the earth, if the cold was unusually severe and prey was scarce, which terrible profanity caused the inhabitants to pro-BOOTS, SHOES & BROGANS paper are graves from Germany in order to be bounded by the bound of the and yet, strange to say, there is not one trace of them to be found in my portion of the ruins

> The inundations of 1312, 1421, 1426 and 1476 were, unfortunately, not so useful in their effects. Not only whole villages were destroyed the lands decimated and beasts drowned, but human life was sacrificed to a terrible extent. "When the wind blows from the north," writes a contemporary of these fearful times, Cornelius Kempius, "the sea dashes with such fury against the shores that the steeples of the churches and the highest and most soldid houses are often shaken to their foundations, and sometimes thrown to the ground; trees are uprooted, and large iron clad vessels flung with violence on the shores. Hence the reason," he adds, "for surrounding Friesland with a belt of ramparts driven into the earth; but as even these dikes are not always strong enough to resist the violence of the waves, the inhabitants have wisely built their houses on artificial hillooks, in order to have a place of refuge, and to save the lives of man and beast when the fields are inundated and overflowing with water. Happily, how ever, such disasters happen very rarely, owing to the erection of the magnificent works along the coast. In 1825, however, during the month of February, about one-third of Fries-land was submerged by the sudden swelling of the sea and rivers forcing a passage through the dikes placed there to prevent their pro-throughout Friesland.

"No one appears to understand the cause for such a frightful catastrophs. The whole elements seem to have combined to lash their fury against this unfortunate country. Heavy rain, thunder and lightning, joined their force to the power of the waves in order to lay waste the works of man. The terrified inhabitants WEST VIRGINIA COALS | believed their last hour had come when they saw the devastation around them; some fled in horror before the foaming waves which rolled after them in menacing speed; others not so fortunate in being able to flee, only escaped being drowned in their houses by the indomitable courage, energy and fortitude of those who under the trying circumstances displayed a hero-ism worthy of the cause they had undertaken. Terrible auxiety continued for two days, and then the waters began slowly to subside, leav ing behind them the most frightful ravages -The Dead Cities of the Zugder Zee.

THE LIQUOR TRADE. - The annual report of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue shows that there are 4,992 distilleries in the United States, 4,604 wholesale liquor dealers, 2,758 breweries, 1,130 rectifiers and 164 598 licensed retail liquor shops. New York has the largest number of brewers, wholesale liquor dealers and saloons or dram shops. North Carolina has the largest number of distilleries and the smallest number of dram shops. Ot the 4,992 distilleries in the Union, that State has 1,025; but for the most part they are very small estab-lishments, and consist of a single still located in the remote and almost inaccessible mountain valleys. In Maine they have no distilleries, but six wholesale liquor dealers and 402 public stloons. But they have other devices for refreshing the inner man. It is said that mook fund rals sometimes cross the border from New Brunswick, with coffins lined with case bottles, Smoking and Chewing Tobacco, from which the spirits are resurrected without waiting for Gabriel's trump to blow.

FOR WIVES .- "What do you think the beautiful word 'wife' comes from?" asks Ruskin. "It is the great word in which the Eng lish and Latin languages conquered the French and the Greek. I hope the French will some day get a word for it instead of that dreadful word femme. But what do you think it comes from? The great value of Saxon words is that they mean something. Wife means 'weaver.'
You must be either housewives or house mothers; remember that. In the deep sense, you must either weave men's fortunes and embroider them, or feed upon and bring them to decay. Wherever a true wife comes, home is always around her. The stars may be over her head—the glowworm in the night-cloud grass may be the fire at her foot; but home is where she is; and for a noble woman it stretches far around her, better than houses ceiled with cedar or painted with vermilion, shedding its quiet light for those who else are homeless. This I believe to be the woman's true place and power." The 52d annual meeting of the Hydrau-lion S. F. E. Co., will be held on Tuesday, January 1st at 71 c'clock p. m. All .-
